

Modifiers Exercise

name:

Edit the following sentences to correct misplaced or dangling modifiers.

1. Betty Friedan interviews young women who decided to be housewives instead of going to college to support her argument.
2. Against her father's wishes, they were married because Edna thought Léonce was kind.
3. Rather than rewarding me for figuring out how to solve the problem in my own way, I was punished for not following the rules.
4. I am certain some people looked at her when she said she wanted to swim in the lake like she was insane.
5. By providing a little background information before talking about her topic, a reader is able to really understand the significance of what Deborah Tannen is trying to prove.
6. From billboards to radio, you cannot go anywhere that doesn't have some sort of influence from the media.
7. One obstacle people face is the language barrier, like George.
8. I was moved by the story of Trung Dung, who rose from a war refugee to a millionaire businessman written by Dan Rather.
9. Without looking at biological differences, the assumption a child makes about a person's sex is made solely on that person's dress and mannerisms.
10. Even though most Americans view the veiling of women as oppressive, Maysan Haydar suggests that American women seem more caged because of media's beauty standards in her essay.