

Mullins

Parallelism Exercise

name:

Edit the following sentences to create parallel structure.

1. A child can learn from a parent's mistake if the child knows it was wrong, comes to an understanding of how to avoid it, and as long as the parent tries to make the child realize how to make the best of it.
2. The problem-posing method of education allows students to question any piece of information given to them and students can analyze the meanings behind the information.
3. I was once told that not only education was the key to life, but success as well.
4. The obstacles working class immigrants have in their way are the cost of a place to stay, their families don't support them, and they lack energy after days of hard work.
5. Problem-posing education is a system in which students are creative thinkers and the teacher proposes problems.